2 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Number 71, Gutknecht
3 against the United States.

4 Mr. Tigar, you may proceed whenever you are ready.

5 ORAL ARGUMENT BY MICHAEL E. TIGAR, ESQ.

6 ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER

7 MR. TIGAR: Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the 8 Court: This case presents a serious question. Here and 9 Oestereich against the Selective Board but not decided in that 10 case of whether the Selective Service system is being used to 11 punish or sanction dissent behavior without due process,
12 without Congressional authorization and under standards so
13 vague and broad as to offend the First Amendment.

14 There is, in addition here two serious questions.
15 There are here two serious questions concerning criminal 16 procedure in the 9.7 percent of all Federal criminal prosecu-
17 tions which are represented by Selective Service prosecutions 18 today.

19 Q You say almost 10 percent of all Federal 20 criminal cases?

21 A Yes, Mr. Justice Stewart. 9.7, I believe, in 22 the last report.

23 Q The Petitioner, David Gutknecht, participated in an 24 anti-war, anti-draft demonstration on the 16th of October, 25 1967, during the course of which he dropped his registration

1 certificate and notice of classification, along with a mimeo-
2 graphed statement of position on the Vietnam War and conscrip-3 tion, at the feet of a United States Marshal in the Federal 4 Building in Minneapolis.

5           Eight days later on the 24th of October 1967,
6 General Hershey, the Director of the Selective Service System,
7 issued the letter to all local board and Local Board Memorandum
8 Number 85, which are reprinted in Appendix B.

9           Q     What was the Petitioner's classification at 10 that time?

11           A     At that time, Mr. Chief Justice, he was classi-12 fied 1-A, although he had an appeal pending, which meant that 13 he could not be inducted.

14           Q     Does the record show anything about how long 15 a time is involved in processing appeals in that particular 16 board?

17           A     No, Mr. Chief Justice; it does not. "The 18 average time is a meaningless figure; it varies greatly, 19 depending on the workload. Those figures are collected most 20 recently in the Marshall Commission Report, "In Pursuit of 21 Equity."

22           The local board memorandum and letter urged local 23 boards to use the delinquency power to reclassify and order for 24 priority induction registrants who engaged in illegal demon-25 strations.

1 As soon as it could, under the regulations, the 2 Petitioner's board on December 21, 1967 sent him a delinquency
3 notice, reprinted on Page 44 of the appendix. And a week --
4 a day and Christmas day after that, sent him an order to re-
5 port for priority induction, taking him out of his statutorily
6 and regulatorily mandated position in the order of call.
7 And ordering him for military service ahead of the time he 8 would otherwise have had to report.

9 Q Was a subpoena pending from his 1-A classifica-10 tion at this time?

11 A No. If it had been pending, Mr. Justice
12 Stewart, it would have been illegal under the regulations.
13 It was not pending.

14 Q Thank you.

15 A The Petitioner concededly reported for induc-
16 tion but did not obey the order of the induction center 17 officials relating to his processing. A prosecution for 18 refusal to report for and submit to induction followed, and he 19 is currently under sentence of four years in prison.

20 The delinquency regulations, if the Court please,
21 provide that when a registrant fails to perform any duty, a 22 term given no further definition, under the Act or regulations
23 he may in the unfettered discretion of the board be declared 24 delinquent. If he is deferred or exempt, he may again, with 25 the unfettered discretion of the board be classified in the 1 class available for service.

2 If he is already 1-A he is sent to the head of the 3 list for induction. Now, if he is reclassified out of the 4 deferred or exempt status he has a personal appearance before 5 the board at an appeal.

6 If, like the Petitioner, he is already 1-A, he is 7 entitled to no hearing whatever before the local board, under 8 the regulations, save that hearing which the board in its 9 absolute discretion may choose to give him.

10 The decision to declare, retain or remit to delin-
11 quency status, resides under the regulations with the dis-
12 cretion of the board.

13 It's our contention, as set forth in our brief, that 14 this kind of administrative sanctioning procedure involving 15 the summary deprivation of a benefit or privilege under a regula-16 tory system, knows no parallel in Federal administrative law
17 today. And when coupled with administration under the broad 18 ranging directive that the Director of Selective Service, to 19 have local boards reach out to get at dissention behavior, 20 the regulations have a fearsome, deterrent effect upon the 21 exercise of protective freedoms.

22 Q How much of your case depends upon whether he 23 did or did not have the right to a hearing at that time?

24 A Mr. Chief Justice, I would say our case depends 25 not at all upon that point. We do, of course, contend that

1 the regulations imposed punishment and therefore he was en-
2 titled to a judicial trial.

3 Second, that they impose a sanction at least and he 4 is entitled to due process, an adversary hearing, but even if 5 the Court should decide those questions against us, we believe 6 that Greene and McElroy compels reversal here.

7 Greene and McElroy, it will be recalled, did not 8 require the Court to reach the constitutional issue; all the 9 Court held was that given our presumption in favor of fair-10 ness we would not presume that the Congress authorize an 11 administrative agency to dispense with these fundamental 12 procedural decencies, without an express statement by the 13 Congress and an express statement by the President of an in-14 tention to do so.

15 And if the Court were to adopt that position, which 16 seems to me sensible and supported by the former decisions of 17 the Court, the constitutional issue need not be reached.

18 However, we do believe that if the constitutional 19 issue must be reached it should be decided in our favor.
20 These regulations in their purpose, their language, their 21 administration and their effect, are punitive. Even the 22 Government cannot evade this issue. In its brief it asserts
23 on the one hand that they are not punitive and in the Appen-
24 dix to its brief it reprints a letter from General Hershey
25 to Mendel Rivers which makes their punitive intent abundantly

1 clear.

2 On Page 81, General Hershey says: "The Selective 3 Service should not be used for punitive purposes." If by that 4 it is meant that one should be inducted into the armed forces
5 as punishment for an offense which is not related to Selective 6 Service, leaving the regulations to be applied in that vast 7 number of Federal offenses which may be found in the inter-
8 stices of the Selective Service Act and regulations.

9 Indeed, the delinquency regulations are far broader 10 than is necessary to achieve the limited nonpunitive purpose
11 which the Government would ascribe to them. Under the regula-
12 tions a registrant is presumed to be 1-A unless he supplies
13 the board with information about his status. And perhaps 14 properly so. That compels him to go in there and tell the 15 local board what he's been doing, whether he's entitled to a 16 deferment or exemption.

17 A delinquency system which limited local board 18 discretion and which provided that a registrant's classifica-19 tion was to be frozen and he could be frozen in 1-A, for 20 example, and that no request for deferment would be con-21 sidered until he started cooperating with the local board in 22 supplying information if again placed under a limited, non-23 discretionary, regulatory scheme, might be nonpunitive, but 24 taking the further step of priority induction, illustrates, I 25 think, the punitive purpose which lies at the base of these

1 regulations.

2 Q Within that hypothetical you have just given 3 would you say that the regulation so-constructed, was authorized 4 by the statute?

5 A No, Mr. Justice Harlan, we would not. I
6 think that this regulatory scheme finds no authorization
7 whatever in the Selective Service Act. And it ought to be 8 held unauthorized and the President left, if he wishes to, to 9 -- excuse me, I misunderstood your question.

10 If the regulations were redrafted with the limita-
11 tion I have just suggested, perhaps this Court could find 12 then, approval under the statute authorized by the President's 13 general rule-making power.

14 Q That was my question.

15 A That would be a different case; yes, Mr.
16 Justice Harlan.

17 The present scheme with posing in local boards this 18 absolute discretion, finds no authorization in the statute
19 and there is no indication that the Congress has ever ex-20 plicitly and carefully considered it, as it has explicitly and 21 carefully considered every other Federal regulatory scheme that 22 I know of, which involves the imposition of a sanction of this 23 character.

24 We turn, therefore, to the inhibitory effect of the 25 Hershey directive upon the exercise of protected freedoms.

1 Q Where did you say that letter was?

2 A The letter, Mr. Justice Black, appears at Page
3 81 of the Government's brief. It is a response to a letter
4 from -- to a request from Mendel Rivers for information.

5 The Government has attempted to evade the free
6 speech issue in this case, in its brief and oral argument
7 yesterday, by denying that it exists. It overscores this by 8 saying that the Petitioner's turning in of his card is not 9 protected conduct. We argue in our brief that it is. But,
10 the Court needn't reach that issue in order to find a First 11 Amendment fault with the Hershey directive.

12 The record in this case indicates that the board 13 had before it the following information:

14 First, a letter from the United States Attorney, 15 reprinted at Pages 42 and 43 of the Appendix, stating that 16 the Petitioner had participated in an anti-war, anti-draft 17 demonstration and turned in his card.

18 Second, the board had before it the indubitably 19 persuasive words of General Hershey, counseling it to use its 20 broad range of discretionary powers to punish the aim here 21 which the five ay members of the board conceived to be 22 illegal.

23 And finally, there is the delinquency notice. We 24 have here a case, therefore, in which the directive, the 25 regulatory scheme, the Hershey directive, local board

1 memorandum supplemented by this very vague system of pro-
2 cedural provisions in the delinquency regulations, is un-3 constitutional on its face.

4 And here, as in N.A.A.C.P. and Button; as in 5 Freedman and Maryland; Aptheker against the Secretary of 6 State; it doesn't matter whether the Petitioner's conduct 7 could be reached and punished under a more narrowly drawn
8 regulatory and statutory scheme. The directive, being uncon-9 stitutional on its face; the regulations supplementing this 10 chilling effect by their vagueness in the discretion they vest
11 in local boards, requires a reversal of the Petitioner's 12 conviction.

13 This reading is indeed supported by the only prior 14 Selective Service decision of this Court which is inpoint:
15 Sicurella against the United States. In Sicurella the local 16 board had before it the illegal recommendation by the Depart-
17 ment of Justice that the Petitioner's conscientious objector 18 claim be not sustained and the Court held that given the 19 presence, though mistaken recommendation that the conviction 20 had to be reversed because it did not affirmatively appear in 21 the Selective Service file; that the board had disavowed the 22 unlawful and mistaken views of the Department of Justice.

23 The final point, <sup>in</sup> which I would address myself in 24 oral argument today, leaving the remainder of our rather 25 technical arguments to our very lengthy brief, is the 1 variance question.

2 The Petitioner was indicted, if the Court please,
3 for refusal to report for and submit to, induction. In a 4 part of our brief that I don't propose to argue, we say that 5 that indictment fails to state an offense because it's bad
6 under Rule 7 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

7 But that aside, repeatedly the Petitioner reported;
8 the Government doesn't deny that. He then went to the induc-
9 tion center and when there refused, the record shows, to obey 10 certain orders by induction center officials that he submit 11 to processing. He was never given an opportunity to refuse to 12 submit to induction.

13 Submitting to induction, as this Court had occasion 14 in Mr. Justice Douglas's opinion to the Court in Billings and 15 Truesdell, to consider at some length is a well-defined, 16 orderly step in the process of selection of men into the armed 17 forces of the United States.

18 Q What do you say he did if he did not refuse to 19 submit to induction.

20 A Mr. Chief Justice, there is an offense. There 21 is a duty of a registrant to obey the orders of the induction 22 center officials and the failure to perform that duty can be 23 prosecuted under Section 12-A. We have here, therefore, a case 24 that is on all fours with Stirone against the United States in 25 which the indictment charged a conspiracy respecting the

1 importation of sand into Pennsylvania and the proof at trial 2 showed a conspiracy involving both the importation of sand
3 and the exportation of steel.

4 In other words, the proof at trial was quite dif-
5 ferent from the offense with which the Petitioner was charged.
6 And I would say that that is a not inconsiderable problem.
7 Given the large number of these offenses that are being prosecu-
8 ted in the courts, it devolves upon the Government with an 9 especial burden, I think, to plead with accuracy and above all 10 to present to the grand jury all of the facts so that at the 11 time the charge is made there has been a thorough and full 12 consideration of what it is the defendant should be prosecuted 13 for.

14 Q Perhaps I didn't make my question clear enough, 15 Mr. Tigar. If the man presents himself at the induction
16 center and, as you say, refuses to take the medical examina-
17 tion or refuses to fill out forms, has he refused to comply 18 with those induction orders?

19 A He has, Mr. Chief, refused to comply with that 20 part of the induction process that deals with the physical 21 and mental examination.

22 Q Is that an offense under the statute?

23 A Yes, it is. It's an offense under the regula-24 tions of the statute. 12-A of the Act makes it a crime to 25 refuse to perform any duty under the regulations. The

1 regulations make it a duty to comply with those orders of 2 induction center officials.

3 Q Did I understand you to say that he did not 4 refuse to comply with induction orders which the statute con-
5 templates to make out an offense?

6 A No, Mr. Chief Justice, that is not my point.
7 My point is that if he committed any offense at all it was the 8 offense of refusing to obey orders that he take physical and 9 mental examination at the induction center. And it was not 10 the offense of which he was indicted; the refusal to submit 11 to induction, which is a very precisely-defined offense in the 12 Selective Service and Army Regulations which this Court had 13 before it in Billings against Truesdell.

14 Q And was that raised at the trial?

15 A The variance question?

16 Q Yes.

17 A No, Mr. Chief Justice, it was not raised at the 18 trial. The issue arose during the trial and I think from the 19 record in the Court of Appeals that the contention that was 20 focused on was the failure of the indictment to inform the 21 Petitioner of the offense with which he was charged. I think 22 that this question is fairly compassed within that and it is 23 certainly a question upon which certiorari was granted.

24 Q Is it your position that every destruction or 25 failure to carry a draft card in your possession is an exercise

1 of First Amendment rights?

2 A Mr. Chief Justice, the destruction question, I
3 believe, is foreclosed by the Court's decision in O'Brien
4 against the United States. It is our position that under the 5 circumstances of this case in which the surrender of the card
6 was a part of a constitutionally-protected course of conduct, 7 that it was a protected First Amendment activity.

8 Q That is, assuming that it is surrender -- the 9 act of surrendering falls in that category. Does that mean 10 that the actor is forever, thereafter excused from complying 11 with the requirement to carry his draft card in his possession?

12 A I would say not, Mr. Chief Justice, although it 13 is a question that had not occurred to me until you asked it.
14 If the board were to send him another card and if his failure 15 to possess it is unrelated to a course of conduct in which he 16 is exercising his First Amendment right of dissent, then I 17 think that would be a different case than the one that we have 18 before us.

19 Our point there is that there is a difference, as I
20 believe the Court said in O'Brien, between permanently render-21 ing one's certificate unavailable and the abandonment of it.
22 And that there has been by the Government no showing that this 23 conduct by the Petitioner and similar conduct by others across 24 the country has interfered with the operation of the Selective 25 Service System. Thus, we do not have a showing by the

1 Government that countervailing interest is paramount, cogent,
2 important, strong or any of the other words which the Court has 3 used in defining the permissible scope of limitations of 4 speech and nonspeech conduct when they are brigaded together.

5 Q Is it the duty of the board to send somebody 6 another card when it learns that that person's card has been 7 alleged by third parties that that person's card has been 8 lost, or destroyed?

9 A According to regulations, Mr. Justice Stewart, 10 no statement that the board has such a duty.

11 Q I suppose a registrant who loses his card 12 through his own negligence or carelessness or because it was 13 stolen or something, that he can apply and get a new one; 14 can't he?

15 A He can get a new one. The difficulty -- 16 another difficulty with these regulations, of course, is that 17 if the board gets a card which the registrant has lost it has 18 no way of knowing the reason why he's abandoned it and there 19 is no provision under the regulations to give him a hearing.
20 Indeed, in this record the board never had any evidence that 21 the Petitioner surrendered his card. His Selective Certificates 22 aren't even in the file. I don't know where they are. The 23 only evidence the board had was the United States Attorney's 24 letter.

25 Q Well, that was hearsay evidence but there is no

1 dispute about what did happen, is there, in this case?

2 A There is no dispute, no. But I think it under-3 scores one of the dangers in this regulatory scheme, sir.

4 Q I wonder do they need a regulation of any kind
5 to guide the boards in what to do if , draft card turns up
6 under some lost and found process. Do they need a regulation 7 to tell the board to send that card to the registrant again?

8 A No, Mr. Chief Justice, I would not say that they 9 would. And if the actions of the board werelimited to sending 10 the card back to the registrant we wouldn't have the case we 11 have.

12 It's only when the board seeks to use the coming into 13 its office of the card as the predicate for depriving of a 14 benefit conferred, by the statute and regulations that a quite 15 serious congressional authorization and due process problem is 16 raised.

17 Q Would it make a difference in that situation
18 whether the board was aware that there had been a deliberate
19 disposition of the card as compared with an inadvertent loss 20 of the card?

21 A No, Mr. Chief Justice, it would not make a 22 difference, unless that determination were made after the kind 23 of adversary hearing which this Court has in other cases in-24 volving imposition of sanctions regarded as indispensable.

25 Q Well, do I understand you to be suggesting that

1 if the card shows up that the board by any process must hold 2 an adversary hearing to determine whether it was lost or 3 deliberately thrown away.

4 A It is our position that the regulations are 5 invalid for failure to provide such a hearing. Yes, that 6 seems reasonable that if the board is going to take away the 7 registrant's statutory, regulated and mandated position in the 8 manpower pool, that it ought to have some means -- reliable, 9 fair, orderly means for informing itself.

10 That is our position.

11 In conclusion I find it quite difficult to state my 12 sense of urgency about this case. Mr. Ruckelshaus perhaps set 13 our theme for us yesterday in brief. There is today a rising 14 tide of protest activity. Much of that activity involves con-
15 duct which under this Court's decisions, can clearly be 16 punished.

17 That is not the issue in this case. The War in 18 Vietnam is not the issue in this case, nor is conscription.
19 The issue is whether, having chosen to fight a war in Vietnam
20 with a conscript army, we ought to tolerate in doing so, 21 departure from the principle that delegations of power are 22 mistrusted when personal liberty is at stake. That no man 23 should be condemned before he's heard. And however outrageous 24 a man's political conduct, it cannot be punished by invoking a 25 system of rules which are vague and overbroad on their face.

1 I think if we depart from these principles, then 2 these very difficult times the constitutional compact is more
3 than dishonored, it will have become the cruelest of illusions.

4 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Ruckelshaus.

5 ORAL ARGUMENT BY WILLIAM D. RUCKELSHAUS,

6 ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE U. S.

7 ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT

8 MR. RUCKELSHAUS: Mr. Chief Justice and may it 9 please the Court: I think again today we find ourselves at 10 the outset faced with the same problem that we faced at the 11 outset of the Breen case. And that is that throughout both 12 Breen and Gutknecht, throughout the briefs filed by the 13 Petitioners in both cases and throughout the amicus briefs
14 filed in both cases, there is this overtone or undertone of 15 accusation against the Selective Service System focused in on 16 the Hershey directive, somehow implying that the reason people
17 are being declared -- registrants are being declared delinquent 18 in this country today is because of their protest activities.

19 Now, I don't happen to believe that that is true.
20 However, even if it is true, it has not been proven in either 21 one of these cases.

22 Let me give just one fact that was omitted. On 23 December 20th Mr. Gutknecht was declared delinquent. The 24 Hershey directive was issued in October. On December 9th at 25 Page 41 of our brief is reprinted in Breen -- the brief in

1 Breen is reprinted the joint statement of then Attorney General
2 Ramsey Clark and General Hershey, specifically repudiating the 3 idea that any registrant could be inducted or his induction 4 could be accelerated because of his beliefs; because of any 5 protest activity unrelated to any violation of the delinquency 6 regulation that he engaged in.

7 In the Court below --

8 Q I can't find that.

9 A That's on Page 41 of Breen's brief.

10 Q Oh, Breen; thank you.

11 A The boards and the Selective Service System
12 had this directive or had this joint memorandum of General 13 Hershey and then Attorney General Clark before them after they 14 had the Hershey directive before them.

15 In the Court below on Page 35 of the Appendix, the 16 Court states: "Defendant now claims that he was being unlaw-
17 fully punished for his political views on the Vietnam War."
18 And states that the board's punitive action was in violation
19 of his First Amendment rights." This is the Appellate Court 20 speaking.

21 The District Court, however, found that there was no 22 evidence at trial to support Defendant's contention that his 23 delinquency order was based upon his political views. The 24 District Court found that the delinquency order was based upon 25 the Defendant's violation of the regulation that he had the

1 required cards in his possession at all times. That's what's 2 involved in this case.

3 Q I thought something different was involved.
4 Certainly we don't sit to pass judgment on whether the large 5 number of protests result in revocation of classification.
6 We weren't only concerned with this man. And I thought the 7 question was whether, or not as a matter of procedural due 8 process or statutory requirement, each should be entitled to a 9 hearing on whether or not what the District Court said and the 10 Court of Appeals said is true.

11 A Mr. Justice Douglas that is certainly part of 12 this case. But what I am attempting to do at the outset is to 13 find narrowly just what is involved here.

14 Q It seems to me that would be the narrowest one,
15 as a matter of statutory, not the constitutional.

16 A I think that's correct, Mr. Justice Douglas.
17 They have launched their brief, a rather massive attack on the 18 delinquency regulations themselves, saying that they are not 19 authorized by statute that even if they were authorized the 20 statute is so vague as to be devoid of standards.

21 Q I spent a lot of time in the Oestereich case 22 reading a brief filed by the Solicitor General and it seemed to 23 me that the attack made by this Petitioner is more massive than 24 the made by the Solicitor General who I see is absent from this 25 particular brief.

1           A     Well, Mr. Justice Douglas, the Solicitor General
2     in his brief in Oestereich suggested that sound arguments
3     could be made along the lines that Petitioner here makes them.
4     I think that if there is any disagreement it would be that I 5     would delete the word "sound." I think an argument can be 6     made along the lines that Petitioner has made them but I don't 7     believe they are sound. In our brief we relate why we believe 8     they are not.

9           Q     I think you're protected by the First Amendment.

10          A     Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court:
11     the Court below decided this question on rather narrow grounds
12     on the validity of the delinquency regulations in acceleration 13     within a class; within the class in this case, 1-A. I think 14     that question is covered in our brief, but I think the overall 15     question of the validity of the delinquency regulations, as far 16     as reclassification is concerned, is what is either going to be 17     before this Court in this case if they decide not to take it on 18     the narrow grounds or will be in some other cases that are 19     pending here on petition for certiorari and for that reason I 20     think this argument can best be had in terms of the broader 21     question.

22          Q     What would happen if in this case the man had had 23     his draft card stolen from him or burned or lost.

24          A     If it were burned without his consent or without 25     his knowledge, I think clearly, Mr. Justice Marshall, that if

1 this happened and it came to the board's attention and they --

2 Q Well, suppose it didn't come to the board's 3 attention; the only thing that came to the board's attention
4 was he didn't have his card. Under these regulations is it
5 -- not probable, but is it possible that a board could accel-6 erate him?

7 A I think it is possible that a board could do so
8 but I think if they did, Mr. Justice Marshall, it would be a 9 clear abuse of their discretion. And if this is what had 10 happened in this case we would not be here in this Court today.

11 Q Why not?

12 A Because we would have confessed error prior to 13 coming here.

14 I think if, under our interpretation of the regula-15 tions, if a regulation is violated by inadvertence or by mis-
16 take of a registrant and the board attempts to accelerate him
17 under a strict reading of the regulations that this is a clear 18 abuse of discretion on the part of the board; that it is only 19 willful violations on the part of registrants and not only 20 willful, but violations in which the registrant shows no desire 21 to come back into compliance again with the regulations.

22 Q Was he ever offered a new draft card?

23 A He was never offered a new draft card, Mr.
24 Justice Marshall.

25 Q Was it ever suggested that he apply for one?

1           A       But on Page 44 of the Appendix is a copy of the 2 delinquency notice that was sent to Mr. Gutknecht in this case
3 and in that delinquency notice in paragraph two it says: "You
4 are hereby directed to report to the local board immediately
5 in person or by mail or to take this notice to the local board 6 nearest you for advice as to what you should do.

7           Now, Mr. Gutknecht did not do that. He says that 8 because five days later he was reclassified, that this, in 9 effect, did not give him the amount of notice that he needed to 10 bring himself back into compliance. If he had tried to get 11 back into compliance by showing a willingness to possess his 12 cards at any time prior to induction or certainly prior to the 13 notice of induction. I think that again, clearly the board
14 would have been abusing its discretion by not permitting him 15 to come back into compliance.

16           This is consistent with our theory of the delinquency 17 regulations not being punishment, but being remedial in their 18 effect.

19           Q       The regulations don't give any of that pro-20 tection, it leaves it up to the board.

21           A       Well, I respectfully would state, Mr. Justice --

22           Q       That's the point that worries me is if the 23 authority that the board has is uncontrolled authority.

24           A       Well, the board is given discretion without 25 question under the regulations. But I think, like any

1 discretionary grant, there is -- there are times when that can 2 be abused. It is our contention that consistent with the 3 analysis of civil contempt in this case that where someone 4 attempts to bring himself back into compliance with the regula-5 tions there is a clear abuse in this Court --

6 Q In the Breen case I would assume that he 7 couldn't get into Court before that; could he? In your position
8 in the Breen case he couldn't have that litigated.

9 A In Breen he could bring himself back into com-10 pliance by simply agreeing to --

11 Q I mean when he was classified and got his notice 12 in five days to report he couldn't have litigated that.

13 A In Breen he has never been given --

14 Q No, I meant in this case, that he couldn't 15 litigate.

16 A He has never been given a notice of induction.

17 Q How can this man in this case test out the 18 discretion of the draft board legally --

19 A He's going it in a criminal action in which 20 we are here before this Court, Mr. Justice Marshall.

21 Q It's the only way he could.

22 A That's right, under the regulations; under the 23 law; under Section 10(b)(3) this is the vehicle that he can use 24 to test his rights. And that's precisely what he's doing, 25 here in this Court.

1           As a further example of what I'm saying in Number 2 623 before this Court now, Troutman against the United States, 3 a confession of error -- a virtual confession of error will be 4 filed by the Justice Department; by the Solicitor General,
5 tomorrow where Mr. Troutman attempted to bring himself back 6 into compliance --

7           Q     But that won't help this man's four years.

8           A     Mr. Justice Marshall, what I am saying is that 9 attempting to focus what Mr. Gutknecht could have done in order 10 to bring himself back into compliance and to focus on the 11 fact that is the draft boards; if the boards themselves do not 12 permit him to come back into compliance, we're prepared to 13 confess error. We're prepared to admit that they have abused 14 their discretion.

15           And I think that in the regulations themselves where 16 it says -- the board itself may change its mind at any time;
17 in another regulation where it says it may open the whole
18 proceeding as to his classification at any time --

19           Q     My real difficulty is that as to whether or 20 not the government confesses error is up to one person: the 21 Attorney General of the United States, his uncontrolled dis-
22 cretion and we have the uncontrolled discretion of the board;
23 controlled only by the uncontrolled discretion of the Attorney
24 General of the United States. Is that your position?

25           A     Mr. Justice Marshall, I don't think that we can

1 look at a discretionary grant assuming that it is going to be 2 abused. Obviously, with over 4,000 draft boards in this 3 country, there are abuses. I would not stand here and say 4 there weren't, but where abuses are found; where abuses of 5 that discretionary grant to the boards are found there is a 6 process by which those abuses can be set right. And I think 7 that just as any administrative board is given a discretion
8 and where that discretion is abused the person who is wronged
9 has a power and a right to raise that wrong in a court of law 10 and if it comes to the attention of those who are meant to 11 enforce the law, then this is the way it works in any case.
12 But the Attorney General will be the last one to admit the 13 abuse of discretion or the Solicitor General in this Court.

14 I don't see that that's any different in terms of 15 a grant of discretion to the draft boards than it is to any 16 other administrative agency.

17 Q I only raised it because you said that that's 18 cured the discretion of the draft boards. That's the only 19 reason I raised it.

20 A I don't think that's the only thing that cures 21 them, Mr. Justice Marshall. I don't think the --

22 Q Do you think a case like this could cure it?

23 A Could cure it?

24 Q Sure.

25 A Well, he has the right to --

1 Q To raise it -- you didn't block it you let him
2 raise it, and now it's up here. If that's the way you think
3 it should be I don't see anything wrong with this position 4 for you to take.

5 Q Mr. Ruckelshaus, are you saying to us that 6 any registrant -- any draft registrant who loses his card or 7 is otherwise dispossessed of it through inadvertence and not 8 intent has the key to the solution of the problem by simply 9 getting another card and himself back into compliance at any 10 stage?

11 A Absolutely, Mr. Chief Justice. This is our 12 position; this is our position that this is clearly what is 13 intended by the regulations themselves when they say that the 14 classification may be reopened at any time without regard to 15 other regulations; that he has the right when he is reclassi-
16 fied to notice; that he has a right to a hearing; and he has a 17 right to appeal to the State Appeal Board; that these regula-18 tions read as a whole clearly draw the analogy between civil 19 contempt that we have drawn and make them remedial.

20 The question of punishment that Mr. Justice Marshall
21 addressed himself to yesterday, I think is very much involved 22 in this case as to whether or not the delinquency regulations
23 themselves amount to punishment and acceleration and that if it 24 does amount to punishment, is it done so without due process or 25 the Fifth Amendment and Sixth Amendment guarantees?

1           Now, yesterday when I just mentioned in passing
2 your question, Mr. Justice Marshall, about what the punishment 3 question that bothered you that there may be elements of 4 punishment in the delinquency regulations; the counsel jumped 5 with glee in his rebuttal argument that I was willing to admit 6 that there may be elements of punishment, but I think that 7 really it would do this Court a little good to get into the 8 semantical argument of just exactly what amounts to punishment

9           It is our position on Page 39 and following of our 10 brief that some of the indicia of legal punishment are present
11 here just as they were outlined in the Kennedy-Mendoza case.
12 Among those indicia that are outlined in that case are the 13 sanctions that are here ultimately involved in affirming a 14 disability. He is going to be restrained if he is in the 15 army.

16           Secondly, it comes into play only in the finding of 17 cienterre(?). This is in line with our theory that there has 18 to be a willful violation of the regulations and a willful
19 refusal to come back into compliance with the regulations 20 before the board has properly exercised its discretion in 21 declaring someone delinquent.

22           Thirdly, the behavior to which it applies is already 23 a crime and this is true in this case. It is already a crime, 24 a violation of the regulations. Does it promote one of the 25 traditional aims of punishment in deterrents and retributions

1 which were named in the Kennedy-Mendoza case. I think that 2 while there are some questions about the deterrents as being 3 only used and only defined in terms of punishment, but there 4 are the deterrent aspects of this.

5 But there are indicia that do not point to punishment
6 as outlined in the Kennedy-Mendoza Induction has not his-7 torically been regarded as punishment.

8 Secondly, whether there is an alternative purpose
9 may be assigned; a nonpenal purpose assigned to the regulations 10 involved. And I think the delinquency regulations do have an 11 alternative purpose. The purpose of the regulation is, 12 essentially, twofold. It's to induce cooperation with the 13 Selective Service System on the part of all draft eligible 14 men and this is where the civil contempt analogy comes in.

15 If we are trying to define this in a remedial sense;
16 if we're trying to get cooperation, just as in a civil con-17 tempt proceeding if somebody comes back into compliance; if 18 he does what the regulations say, then he will be put back into 19 his prior classification. Otherwise it would be an abuse of 20 discretion.

21 And in this case the purpose of the regulations was 22 to cure what has happened and not to punish what has happened.
23 And just as in the Troutman case we have confessed error and 24 I think we would be willing to do so in any instance in this 25 Court or in any court where it was shown that an effort was

1 made to cure the error.

2 The second purpose of the -- this is a nonpenal 3 purpose -- is the maintenance of the nondelinquent morale of 4 those who do comply with the regulations. It should not, it 5 seems to me be discouraged by the success of those who do not 6 and for this reason I think there is a good purpose of the -- 7 alternative purpose of the statute, but as I said at the 8 beginning, I think to get into an order(?) in this Court about 9 whether this amounted to legal punishment might really cause
10 the Court to miss the point. Because the point in this case
11 is: why are we talking about punishment? We are talking about 12 punishment in terms of the delinquency regulations to find 13 out whether he has been deprived of due process or his Fifth 14 and Sixth Amendment rights.

15 And what is, in this case, the punishment of which 16 Mr. Gutknecht, the Petitioner complains, it is that accelerated 17 induction. This is what he complains of and before he can be 18 inducted in an accelerated matter he has the right to refuse 19 induction just as he did here and thereby submit himself to 20 a criminal prosecution/<sup>in</sup>which the has the full panoply of Fifth 21 and Sixth Amendment rights.

22 And I think that this is a clear distinction between 23 this case and the case in Mendoza-Martinez where the Court went 24 into the admittedly difficult question of what amounts to 25 punishment and what doesn't. Because Mr. Mendoza was never

1 given a hearing; he was denationalized; he left the country
2 in order to avoid the draft and having left he was immediately
3 denationalized. He had no right to a hearing to contest that 4 denationalization and there was no way he could bring up a 5 contesting of his rights and the Court there said that that 6 was punishment without the due process of Fifth and Sixth 7 Amendment rights which he should have.

8 I think we can draw an analogy between what has 9 happened here and a grand jury proceeding. When a man is 10 indicted under a grand jury proceeding he is in a very real 11 sense, punished. He may be put in jail if he's indicted and 12 without bail in a non-bailable offense or bail may be set so 13 high that he can't meet it and he stays there. He has had none
14 of his Fifth or Sixth Amendment rights and probably little due 15 process at that time.

16 But in this case where the board itself has found him
17 delinquent because he violated one of the regulations, I say 18 the analogy between this and the grand jury is very close.

19 And secondly, as far as the board hearing itself is 20 concerned if he is given notice of the delinquency itself, the 21 notice that I read right on Page 44 of the Appendix, where it 22 says come in and let us tell you how we can show you how to 23 avoid a further delinquency. In this case -- in my estimation, 24 although it is contested by the Petitioner, if he had asked for 25 a hearing he would have been given one. There is no evidence

1 that he asked for a hearing in this case because what was there
2 to hear? He had turned in his draft card. They are not going
3 to hear whether he is willing to take them back or not. There
4 is no fact situation for the board to hear. There is a clear
5 regulation which Mr. Gutknecht violated and under that regula-6 tion it is within the discretion of the board to apply the 7 delinquency regulations which they did in this case.

8 Now, again under our theory he would have the right
9 to purge himself from this violation and I think had he shown
10 a desire to do so and the board had refused to let him do it
11 we would have been the first to confess error. But he made no
12 effort to do that and in this case I submit that there is no
13 fact situation with which this Court could focus on to say 14 whether the procedure of due process in the hearing at the 15 board level has been violated.

16 Now, I submit that the Kennedy-Mendoza analysis is 17 simply not sufficient in this case to determine that what we're 18 talking about is legal punishment. I think there are some 19 differences, but even if you find that the line between punish-20 ment and nonpunishment; if you find this falls slightly over 21 the line toward punishment, I think that even if that is true, 22 he has been given at one stage at the end of this process all 23 of his Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights. He has been given 24 the complete due process.

25 Q That is in this criminal trial, you mean?

1
2 A Yes, that's right, Mr. Justice Stewart. This 3 is the statutory framework that the Congress has set up whereby 4 this man can raise his rights and there is no such statutory 5 framework in the Mendoza situation.

6 The other argument of the Petitioner was in their 7 brief that even if it wasn't punishment we have not provided
8 the procedure of due process that is necessary. And I think 9 in pointing out that he did receive notice it is our conten-10 tion that a fair reading of the regulations would be that he 11 could receive a hearing if he so requested. Now, this is a 12 completely speculative question before this Court because he 13 didn't request a hearing, either before he received the 14 delinquency notice or after he received his reclassification 15 and I don't see how he can be heard to complain here when he 16 has not asked for a hearing.

17 As far as the variance between the charge and the 18 proof is concerned, I think that it is fairly stated in the 19 brief and I think that question, plus the argument that the 20 affidavit itself or the indictment itself was duplicitous, 21 borders on the frivolous. There are cases cited in our brief
22 which I think clearly point out the questions involved.

23 Yesterday we discussed the problem of Congressional 24 authorization and I think that in the broad sense that the 25 delinquency regulations are a fair grant to the administrative branch by Congress of an effort to implement what is admittedly

1 a difficult statute. To implement a Selective Service law in 2 at a time in this country in which many people are opposed to 3 the results that might occur from going into the army but I 4 think that given the policy as set down by the Congress in 5 its Executive Branch that this is a fair way of implementing 6 that policy. And that this Court should affirm the Court below 7 and uphold the delinquency regulations as adopted by the 8 President.

9 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, Mr. Ruckelshaus.
10 Mr. Tigar.

11 REBUTTAL ARGUMENT BY MICHAEL TIGAR, ESQ.

12 ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER

13 MR. TIGAR: Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the 14 Court: If it is the Government's position that these regula-
15 tions ought to be limited, the President has the power to limit 16 them by a stroke of the pen. The Selective Service System is 17 exempt from the rule-making requirements of the Administrative 18 Procedure Act and in tomorrow morning's Federal Register the 19 position of the Executive Branch will be made indisputably
20 clear.

21 But if that is not to be done, then we accept the 22 Government's concession. If willfulness is required and that 23 if a hearing must be given if one is asked for.

24 And this conviction must therefore be reversed, be-25 cause there is in this record in the Selective Service file,

1 which as this Court held in Cox against the United States,
2 is the sole basis of review. No finding of willfulness and 3 there is no showing that the Petitioner was ever offered a 4 hearing.

5 Q I'm looking at Page 30 of the Appendix which is 6 the opinion of the Court of Appeals, which indicates that there
7 was contained in the Selective Service Board file in this case 8 the information as to the circumstances under which the 9 Petitioner separated himself from the -- from his draft card.

10 A Yes, Mr. Justice Stewart, there is on Page 42
11 and 43 that information. Of the Appendix. It consists of a 12 letter from an Assistant United States Attorney, to the Deputy 13 State Director of the Selective Service System.

14 It would be our position that that could not be 15 relied upon to establish that there was --

16 Q Well, all right, but there was information in 17 the record. There was information in the record if this is 18 accurately reproduced here in the Appendix as to the circum-
19 stances under which this man and his draft card became separa-
20 ted; isn't that right? Indicating a willful separation on his 21 part as contrasted to a careless or a negligent or accidental 22 one.

23 A It is true, Mr. Justice Stewart, that there is 24 evidence in the record. If I said there was none, I mispoke 25 myself.

1 Q I understood you to say that and I just wanted
2 to be sure.

3 A Yes. I misspoke myself. My position would be 4 and it is that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant
5 a finding by the board of willfulness. And I believe I went 6 on to say that there was no finding by the board of willfulness.

7 Q Do you think that in the file in the District
8 Court there is an actual basis for a finding of willfulness?

9 A There is, Mr. Chief Justice, a factual basis 10 there. But the review of the Selective Service decision is 11 on file made by the Selective Service System in the register.

12 Which brings me to another point here. Mr.
13 Ruckelshaus has said that the criminal trial that the regis-
14 trant receives is a substitute for the due process hearing 15 which we claim he is entitled to before the agency. But, of 16 course that trial has been the most constricted standard of 17 judicial review of board determinations, particularly an effec-18 tual determination of any judicial review; of any administra-
19 tive action that the Court has had the power to review.

20 Q And by the same token the standard of proof on 21 the Government is infinitely higher; is it not?

22 A But only as to the factual issues, Mr. Chief 23 Justice. The issue of whether there is any evidence in the 24 file to support the board's determination has, this Court has 25 held, the character of an issue of law and therefore the

1 Government does not have the obligation of proof beyond a 2 reasonable doubt with respect to it.

3 So that there is not that safeguard provided with 4 respects to the facts presented to the agency.

5 Q Was Mr. Gutknecht limited in the defense that 6 he was allowed to tender during the trial of this case?

7 And did he put in as defensive matter the First Amendment claim
8 and so on? I gather from reading the Court of Appeals opinion 9 that he was permitted to do so.

10 A Yes. Those, too, are issues of law which he 11 would be entitled to present.

12 Q And was entitled to present -- I mean and was 13 allowed to present.

14 A He was; yes, sir.

15 Q What is your position if you assume that the 16 record does show that this conduct was willful, the loss of 17 his card?

18 A Our position then, Mr. Justice Black, is that 19 the regulations are invalid as not having been authorized by 20 Congress. They are nonetheless invalid for failure to provide 21 procedural safeguards and that the Hershey memorandum is an 22 incommutable system of regulation and scheme of regulations
23 which violates the First Amendment on its face.

24 Q It would be invalid because of what?

25 A That the regulations here, the delinquency

1 regulations; the Hershey memorandum and the local board memor-
2 andum, taken together on a scheme for regulating dissent,
3 which is unconstitutional on its face.

4 And that, therefore, because the board acted in 5 reliance upon a part of this scheme the conviction must be 6 reversed.

7 Q I would understand that argument a great deal 8 better is you were arguing to us that when he received this 9 delinquency notice he had asked for a hearing and had been 10 refused a hearing. But he did not ask; did he?

11 A Mr. Chief Justice, the regulations do not pro-
12 vide for a hearing. A fair reading of Regulation 1642.14(b)
13 establishes that in a case such as this where the Registrant
14 is already 1-A that the only hearing that can be granted re-15 poses in the absolute, unfettered discretion of the local 16 board; second --

17 Q But that was not tested out by asking for it; 18 was it?

19 A My response to that would be twofold, Mr.
20 Chief Justice.

21 First, the delinquency notice, although it asks the 22 registrant to come into the board, says he can come into any 23 board. The regulations provide that what is to happen to him 24 there is not telling him that he is entitled to a hearing.

25 And second, that this Court held in McKart against

1 the United States, he would be excused from failure to exhaust
2 because of the futility of doing so, both against the Selective 3 Service Board 372 Fd.2d 817.

4 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, Mr. Tigar.
5 Thank you for submission and thank you for your submission, Mr.
6 Ruckelshaus. The case is submitted.

7 (Whereupon, at 11:05 o'clock a.m. the argument in 8 the above-entitled matter was concluded)
